The figures show the historical events and risk concentration for a variety of hazards, including earthquakes, landslides, tornadoes, snow storms, and hurricanes. Darker regions indicate greater susceptibility to hazard. A robust disaster management program would consider the risks and consequences of these events occurring in tandem over time.